

Analysis

This was the last week for Andrew to work as a project manager.

This iteration, most of the time was spent on coding. The focus for this iteration was to correct bugs that have been discovered during testing and to update the design according to WCAG. We managed to remove many of the bugs reported in issues and also implemented some features that have been left out earlier in the project.

Andrew added API-routes to the server for changing users details and password while Jimmy added these features to the client. Sofia worked on requirement F13, "Consent email", so now an email is sent to the user after registration with a link that users need to click to verify their email and be able to use the application.

Linda started working on requirement F20, "User account deletion", and updated the design throughout the application according to WCAG. Text, buttons and colors were updated.

Both Sofia and Andrew added tests for newly implemented requirements. Sofia created manual test cases for some of them and Andrew continued writing Postman-tests for the server.

Some documents were also updated before handover to group 0 for peer review. Updates were made to the technical documentation with new diagrams to match changes in the code and instructions for installing, deploying and hosting both server and client was created.

It feels like we succeeded with our goals for this iteration to remove many bugs and clients design looks way better than earlier. For the next iteration, we will continue update the design on client, adding new test cases and try to remove as many bugs as possible before the presentation and final handover to the customer.
